ABSTRACT

A system and method for providing electronic mass multimedia data transfer from a central data source of multimedia data simultaneously to numerous geographically dispersed subscribers having personal computers, further providing information to each subscriber based exclusively on the proved interests of that individual subscriber. In particular, the invention is well-suited as an improved method for distributing newspapers and multimedia content.